

CULTURED

February 25, 2015

PAULA CROWN MAKES MUSIC IN MIAMI

By Lauren Pellerano Gomez

On February 19, mixed-media artist Paula Crown was honored in the Miami Design District, during a special performance by the fellows of the New World Symphony. The event took place at Transposition, a public art installation by the honoree, marking the first such performance in the District. Crown recently opened her first solo New York exhibition, “The Sublime and the Center: Dimensions of Landscape” at Malborough Gallery in Chelsea, showcasing new paintings and sculptures. The exhibition is on view through March 7.

Paula Crown's installation set the scene for the New World Symphony performance in the Design District

Michael Tilson Thomas and New World Symphony fellows

Adriana Ospina and Erick La Torre

Andres Rozo and Katie Stepan

Armando Collado and Susane Ronai

Nisi Berryman, Paula Crown and Tiffany Chestler

Eduardo Rojo and Monica Madotto

Howard Herring, Edward Shumsky and Craig Robins

Florescia Jimenez-Marcos, Edward Shumsky and Diane Sepler

Leonardo Davalos and Pedro Maal

Anthony Liggins, Paula Verissimo and Colin Carby

Maria Ruiz and Maryanna Estomba

Michael Tilson Thomas and Craig Robins

Michael Tilson Thomas and Howard Herring

Paula Crown

Ron Agam and Adrian Agam

Edward Shumsky, Craig Robins and Howard Herring

Michael Tilson Thomas, Paula Crown, Craig Robins and Howard Herring